

FRAMEWORK 43.2

FALL 2002

CONTENTS

MIDDLE-EASTERN MEDIA ARTS

- Hamid Naficy                      Making Films with an Accent:
Iranian émigré Cinema
- Walid Ra'ad                      I Have Already Been in the Lake of Fire
- Azza El-Hassan                      When the Exiled Films Home
- Haim Bresheeth                      A Symphony of Absence:
Borders and liminality in Elia
Suleiman's Chronicle of a Disappearance
- Jayce Salloum Interview by Molly Hankwitz
- Viola Shafik                      Class Difference and Subjectivity: Two Egyptian
Documentaries
- Kevin Dwyer                      'Hidden, Unsaid, Taboo' In Moroccan Cinema: Abdelkader
Lagtaa's Challenge To Authority
- Yosefa Loshitzky                      A Tale of Three Cities: Amos Gitai's Urban Trilogy
- Tarek Elhaik                      Solitude and Fragments:
Introducing the Video Work of Mounir Fatmi
- Livia Alexander                      Let Me In, Let Me Out, Going Places and Going Back
- James Longley Interview by Jane Adas
- Akram Zaatari                      This Day

Yesim Ustaoglu Interview by Valentina Vitali-West

Deniz Göktürk

Anyone at Home? Itinerant Identities in European Cinema of the 1990s

REVIEWS

Books

Film festivals